

DATE OF SURGERY: 11/11/2011

PREOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Uncircumcised penis.

POSTOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Uncircumcised penis.

OPERATION PERFORMED: Circumcision, removal of foreskin of penis.

SURGEON: Anupama Sunkavalli, MD

ANESTHESIA: Lidocaine jelly.

ESTIMATED BLOOD LOSS: Minimal.

COMPLICATIONS: None.

FINDINGS: Normal-appearing penis.

SPECIMEN: None.

TECHNIQUE USED: 1.1 Gomco used for circumcision.

OPERATIVE PROCEDURE: With the patient in the supine position, the penis and surrounding area was prepped and draped in the usual fashion with Betadine solution and a sterile drape. Two-percent lidocaine was applied to the foreskin. The edge of the foreskin was then grasped with Crile clamps at the 10 and 2 o'clock positions. The skin was then separated from the underlying glans and the pericoronal adhesions lysed with the use of a small metal probe.

A straight clamp was then applied to the posterior aspect of the foreskin in the midline. The clamp was removed and the foreskin divided along this line of demarcation. The foreskin was then retracted and a Gomco bell clamp was applied over the glans. The foreskin was brought around the bell and secured in place posteriorly. The bell was then inserted through the aperture at the base of the clamp and secured in place and tightened. The foreskin was then compressed just proximal to the dorsal incision.

With a sharp knife, the foreskin distally located was excised and then removed. A minimal amount of bleeding was encountered and controlled with pressure dressing and sterile Vaseline gauze. The
